

Fiscal year 2021: A Recap
July 1st, 2020 - June 30th 2021

Growing Through the Pandemic

Continuing advancement through COVID-19

Women Build

We originally scheduled Women Build for a week in May in 2020. At the beginning of March, we knew things were not going to move forward as planned. We were thrilled to develop a safe alternative of stretching out the one week in May to five weeks in September/October to adjust for fewer volunteers on site each day to maintain safe social distancing. We were so grateful to our volunteer builders and fundraisers for making the pivot and adjusting with us. We know that homeownership improves financial, educational, social, and health outcomes for households and communities. And, this past year shed a harsh light on the undeniable importance of having a healthy and stable home as we navigated the COVID-19 pandemic together.

Family Story

Abboud, 40 and Nagwa, 36, are looking forward to resting. The kind of rest that only comes when you have peace of mind. The kind of rest that comes from knowing that you're in a safe place to call home. Their future three-story Habitat for Humanity townhome in Hanover Park, IL is the second of 27 townhomes being developed on the cul de sac. Soon, they'll settle into their three bedroom home where they'll finally feel the safety they've sought for over 15 years. "I joined this program because I knew that having a permanent and affordable place to live would allow us to finally relax after years of moving and feeling afraid of what the next day or year would bring," said Abboud. Nagwa, who is expecting their second child, is also looking forward to the comfort that will come from knowing that they're setting down roots for her family. "Mia loves to run around and play outside. Our new home has a beautiful back yard with a community jungle gym in the middle of the Court. Mia's is going to love playing there and meeting the other children once they can all play together again," she says.

By the time the development is complete, there will be 38 families living on Greenbrook Court. Families like Rhoda's, Habitat future homeowner, who worked alongside Abboud this summer and fall to help advance the construction of the homes on Greenbrook Court. It's this sense of community that is amplifying Abboud's sense of security. Abboud and Nagwa will be joining 11 families on Greenbrook Court and will be the 12th household on the court. They are both excited about this new chapter in their lives, as this will bring more stability for them and their two-year old, where she can grow and the couple can grow their family as well. Being a part of a community where they can plant their roots and thrive is important to them. They hope to build a support system with their neighbors and community members to create a safe environment for their family. This blue townhome with bamboo floors and brown kitchen cabinets offers more than an affordable roof over their heads. It is a place where everyone has a place to sleep, a yard for playing and most importantly, a place to be their authentic selves without fear of persecution. Abboud and Nagwa came to the United States as refugees, fleeing religious persecution in Egypt. After converting to Christianity, they were forced to leave their home, their family and their country in 2005 for fear of their safety. Abboud's mother and daughter both had their lives taken, so together, Abboud and Nagwa made the difficult decision to abandon everything they'd ever known in hopes of someday living in a place where they could worship freely and safely.

Mia's is going to love playing there and meeting the other children once they can all play together again," she says.

After spending four difficult years in Lebanon as refugees they relocated to the United States where they've worked hard to find their bearings and adjust to life in America. The shift was stark as they struggled to find an affordable place to live. With housing costs increasing yearly, they had moved three times within two years. Furthermore, their lack of credit history, they soon found out, would make their dream of having their own place to call home just out of reach. That is until Nagwa heard about Habitat's home buyer program in her English as a Second Language (ESL) course at the College of DuPage. Serendipitously, Abboud's teacher told him about Habitat as well. They knew this was God's sign to act and attend an information session. After hearing of the stability and self-reliance that a Habitat home could provide, Abboud and Nagwa were filled with hope and recommitted themselves to that dream. Almost two years since they first heard about DuPage Habitat and over 500 hours of sweat equity later, Abboud and Nagwa are looking ahead to the future and hope to be able to leave their home to their children, and in turn instill the importance of paying it forward by volunteering at Habitat for Humanity.
